Analysis

Zheng Tuobin visited Brussels, 21-24 May 1985, at the invitation of the European Common Market Commission. The visit is to mark the 10th anniversary of the establishment of diplomatic relations between China and the European Economic Community (EC). It will be the second meeting between the two sides at the ministerial level (the first was held in 1983) to discuss international and bilateral trade, economic relations, and other issues of common interest. On 21 May, China and the EC signed a new 5-year trade and economic cooperation agreement to help boost friendly cooperation in industry, agriculture, science, technology, energy, transport, personnel training, development assistance, and mining. Zheng Tuobin said the agreement marks a significant step in China's growing trade relations with the community. He added that the agreement conforms with the mutual interests of the two sides and with world peace. Bettiza, President of the European Parliament delegation for relations with China, and Nicole Pery, Vice President of the European Parliament, met separately with Zeng Tao and exchanged views on how to strengthen ties between the National People's Congress and the European Parliament. Zheng also met with President of the EC Council of Ministers Giulio Andreotti.

On 22 May, Zheng met and had a cordial, friendly talk with Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens. On the same day, Zheng also met with Acting President of the EC Lorenzo Natali for a friendly talk. Both sides said the trade and economic agreements signed between China and the EC will strengthen existing ties. Zheng, in the name of the Chinese Government, invited Jacques Delors,

President of the EC, to visit China at his convenience; Natali accepted on Delors' behalf.

On 23 May, Zheng met with EC Commissioner for Foreign Relations, Willy de Clercq, to exchange views on the world economic situation and the promotion of bilateral economic and trade cooperation. De Clercq accepted an invitation to visit China next year. Zheng said China is confident of its cooperation with the community because they have no conflict of interests. China has an open door policy and Europe, with its great potential competitiveness, applies a relatively open policy towards China in the technological field. He urged them to strengthen the competitiveness of their products in China. Zheng invited EC countries to invest in China, and to provide state loans and technology transfer. Prior to the delegation's departure on 24 May, Zheng met with Andre Leysen, President of the Federation of Entrepreneurs of Belgium.

Summary

Minister of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Zhen Tuobin visited Brussels 21-24 May 1985 at the invitation of the European Common Market Commission to mark the 10th anniversary of diplomatic relations between China and the EC and to strengthen existing ties between China and the EC. During his visit, Zheng signed a new 5-year trade and economic cooperation agreement between China and the EC. He also met separately with the Belgian Prime Minister, various EC officials, and the President of the Federation of Entrepreneurs of Belgium.

Bilateral Issues

The new 5-year trade agreement with the EC marks a significant step in China's growing trade relations with the EC that would extend cooperation to all economic fields and strengthen existing ties.

Bilateral Issues

China is confident of its cooperation with the community because there is no conflict of interest between them.

Strategic Issues

The new 5-year trade agreement conforms with the mutual interests of the two sides and with world peace.

Reciprocal

Belgian Prime Minister Wilfried Martens visited China in 1985.

Reciprocal

Zheng Tuobin invited Jacques Delors, President of the EC, to visit China at his convenience; he accepted.

Reciprocal

Analysis

From 15 May to 1 June 1985 a delegation led by Vice Premier Li Peng visited three nations in Eastern Europe: the German Democratic Republic (GDR) (15 to 21 May), Poland (21 to 27 May), and Hungary (27 May to 1 June). This was followed by a stopover visit to France from 1 to 5 June. The purpose of the visit was to strengthen China's friendly ties and expand economic, technical, and trade cooperation with the countries visited. Li Peng was the highest-level Chinese official to travel to Eastern Europe in more than two decades.

Li Peng's 7-day visit to the GDR focussed on enhancing economic, trade, and scientific and technical relations. This was the main topic of discussion in Li's meetings with GDR leaders including Chairman of the Council of Ministers Willi Stoph, Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers Wolfgang Rauchfuss, Deputy Chairman of the State Council Guenther Mittag, General Secretary of the German Socialist Unity Party and Chairman of the State Council Erich Honecker, and Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers and Chairman of the State Planning Commission Gerhard Schuerer. Bilateral trade is expected to rise by 54.5 percent in 1985 over the previous year.

The Chinese and German officials briefed each other on their countries' domestic situations, exchanged views on "some international issues of common interest," reportedly including disarmament and the US' Strategic Defense Initiative, and agreed to sign a long-term trade agreement for 1986-1990 as soon as possible. GDR Chairman of the Council of Ministers Willi Stoph expressed his country's hope to be involved in upgrading China's industries. GDR Foreign Trade Minister Horst Soelle and Deputy Minister for Foreign Economic Relations and Trade Chen Jie, a member of Li's delegation, met to work on preparations for the agreement. In his meeting with General Secretary Honecker, Li conveyed to him the regards of CCP General Secretary Hu Yaobang and promised to bring Honecker's regards back to Hu. In addition to official meetings, Li's delegation visited GDR industrial sites including a truck plant, an open cut lignite mine and a lignite power plant, as well as an agricultural cooperative and tourist spots.

Li Peng's delegation continued its Eastern European tour in Poland from 21 to 27 May. Li discussed ways of expanding economic cooperation in talks with Polish Vice Premier Janusz Obodowski and the two signed a trade agreement for 1986-1990 on 25 May. The volume of Sino-Polish trade for 1985 is expected to increase by 1880 percent over 1984. Li toured coal and lignite mines in Poland's coal mining center Katowice and discussed mining and energy cooperation with Polish Mining and Energy Minister Czeslaw Piotrowski. Li also discussed sulfur mining with Minister of Chemical and Light Industry Edward Grzywa and motor industry cooperation with Minister of Metallurgy and Machine Industry Janusz Machiejewicz.

In Li's meeting with First Secretary of the Polish United Workers' Party and Prime Minister Wojciech Jaruzelski, the two exchanged views on the international situation and briefed each other on developments in their own countries. Li praised Poland's achievements in socialist development and stressed that socialist construction is the common goal of China and Poland. He also expressed satisfaction that "the difficulties facing Poland are being overcome and that the situation in the country is stable." Li conveyed to Jaruzelski the regards of CCP General Secretary Hu Yaobang and Premier Zhao Ziyang, to whom Jaruzelski asked Li to return his regards. Deputy Foreign Minister Qian Qichen met with his Polish counterpart Deputy Foreign Minister Jan Majewski to discuss bilateral relations and international issues, including joint actions concerning peace and international cooperation, without interfering in the internal affairs of other states. Li's visit to a former extermination camp, where he placed a wreath on behalf of the Chinese people, was reported only on a Polish broadcast.

The last leg of Li Peng's official East European tour was a 6-day visit to Hungary. Li exchanged views on Chinese and Hungarian domestic situations and economic and trade ties with Vice Chairman of the Council of Ministers Jozsef Marjai, Deputy General Secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party Karoly Nemeth, Chairman of the Hungarian Council of Ministers Gyorgy Lazar and Vice President and Director of the National Planning Bureau Lajos Faluvegi. Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Qian Qichen met and held separate discussions with Hungarian Foreign Minister Peter Varkonyi and Vice Foreign Minister Istvan Roska "in an atmosphere of friendship and mutual understanding." In his meeting with Li, Karoly Nemeth pointed out that each country should act in light of its own specific conditions while every country has experience that can be drawn upon by others. Li asked Nemeth to convey CCP General Secretary Hu Yaobang's regards to General Secretary of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party Janos Kadar and conveyed CCP Central Committee Secretariat member Hu Qili's regards to Nemeth. Later Li conveyed Premier Zhao Ziyang's regards to Chairman of the Hungarian Council of Ministers Gyorgy Lazar. Li and Marjai signed a long-term trade agreement for 1986-1990 on 1 June. Total trade in 1985 is expected to increase by 170 percent over 1984. Li also held talks with various Hungarian ministers and leading economists on furthering Sino-Hungarian economic relations. Li's delegation visited the Budapest International Fair, a computer factory, a bus plant, and agricultural and tourist spots. The day after Li's delegation left Hungary for France, another Chinese delegation led by Minister of Machine Building Industry Zhou Jiannan arrived in Budapest for the first meeting of the Chinese-Hungarian Commission for Economic, Trade, and Scientific and Technical Cooperation set up in a 1984 agreement.

Following Li Peng's visit to Eastern Europe, his delegation made a 5-day stopover in France before returning to China. Economic cooperation and trade continued to be the main topic of discussion in Li's meetings with French Premier Laurent Fabius, Minister of External Relations Roland Dumas, Minister of Foreign Trade and Industrial Redeployment Madame Edith Cresson, and the presidents of the the boards of directors of major French companies including Alstom-Atlantique, Framatome, and Matra. With Dumas, Li also discussed the current world situation. Li also visited the 36th Paris Air Show where he showed interest in the Franco-Italian ATR-42 transport aircraft which China is considering buying.

Summary

From 15 May to 5 June 1985, Vice Premier Li Peng led an economic delegation to the German Democratic Republic, Poland, and Hungary, followed by a stopover in France. In each country, Li met with top officials to discuss expanding economic and trade ties and toured industrial sites, with a special emphasis on lignite and coal mining and vehicle production. In Poland and Hungary, long-term trade agreements for 1986-1990 were signed, while in the GDR discussions were continued on a similar agreement due to be signed soon. Although the CCP does not have party ties with the ruling parties of the countries visited, Li met with the top party official in the GDR and Poland and the number two party official in Hungary, each time conveying to them the regards of their Chinese party counterparts. In addition to bilateral economic relations, in each capital Li exchanged information on each country's domestic situation. Certain international issues, including disarmament, were also discussed when Li or Chinese Deputy Foreign Minister Qian Qichen met with the Foreign Minister or Deputy Foreign Minister in each capital. The only military-related event reported during the entire European visit was Li's trip to the Paris Air Show during the stopover to France.

Bilateral Issues

There is great potential for economic and technical cooperation between China and the countries visited.

Bilateral Issues

Chinese and Polish goals for socialist construction were called identical.

Strategic Issues

China follows an independent and peaceful foreign policy and is opposed to the arms race.

Strategic Issues

China requires a peaceful international environment in order to focus on its modernization drive.

Reciprocal

Polish Deputy Premier Janusz Obodowski visited China in March 1985.

Analysis

Commander of the CPLA Air Force Zhang Tingfa visited France (29 May-9 June 1985) and the United Kingdom (UK) (9-20 June 1985). He is the first Chinese Air Force Commander to visit either country. He also made a brief stopover in Hong Kong (20 June).

During his 12-day visit to France, Zhang attended the annual Paris International Air Show and the air-defense operation centers of the French Air Force, as well as various French Air Force schools and bases.

After meeting with French Air Force Chief of Staff Bernard Capillon, French Secretary of State to the Defense Minister Edwige Avice, and other senior French Air Force officials, Zhang said he hoped the Air Forces of the two countries will learn from each other, exchange experiences, and strengthen cooperation. Zhang praised France's "independent defense policy and its contribution to European unity and cooperation."

During his 12-day visit to the UK, Zhang held talks with Chief of Staff of the British Royal Air Force Air Chief Marshal Sir Keith Williamson, Minister of Defense for Procurement Adam Butler, and other unidentified British military officials. Zhang visited Royal Air Force units and installations at Bentley Point, Cranwell, Northolt, the RAF Strike Command at High Wycombe, and the Staff College at Bracknell. He also held meetings with various Ministry of National Defense officials and

British defense contractors including British Aerospace, General Electric Co. of Great Britain, Westland Aircraft Ltd., and Flight Refueling [no further information]. Zhang also discussed the future of Hong Kong during informal talks with British leaders, although no details were provided.

At the conclusion of his visit to France and the UK, Zhang, during a stopover in Hong Kong, reportedly told Asia Television Ltd. he observed a considerable amount of advanced military technology which would be useful for China's military modernization, but there were no discussions on purchasing any hardware or technology. Zhang's visit was not widely reported by either the French or British news media; the bulk of the information on his visit was derived from Chinese and Hong Kong media.

Summary

CPLA Air Force Commander Zhang Tingfa visited France and the UK (29 May-20 June 1985) where he inspected various facilities and units of the French and British Air Forces. In both countries, Zhang held talks with his counterparts. He attended the annual Paris International Air Show and looked at advanced military technology which he reportedly described as "useful" for China's military modernization, although he did not engage in negotiations for purchases of any military technology. He also met with various British defense contractors. Zhang's visit was not widely reported by either the French or British news media.

Bilateral Issues

The French and Chinese Air Forces should learn from each other, exchange experiences, and strengthen cooperation.

Strategic Issues

France's independent defense policy contributes to European unity and cooperation.

Analysis

Premier Zhao Ziyang visited three West European countries: the United Kingdom (UK) (2-8 June 1985); the Federal Republic of Germany (FRG) (8-16 June 1985), and the Netherlands (16-19 June 1985). He and his party made a brief stopover in Sharjah, United Arab Emirates (UAE). Accompanied by Shaikh Sultan ibn Muhammad al-Qasimi, Zhao toured Sharjah and said he hoped the friendship and cooperation between China and the UAE will grow and develop. Prior to his return to China, Zhao and his party stopped at the Karachi airport, where they were met by the Governor of Sind Province Jahandad Khan, senior Pakistani officials, and the Chinese Ambassador to Pakistan Wang Chuanbin.

On 3 June Premier Zhao Ziyang and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher exchanged the instruments of ratification for the Sino-British joint declaration on Hong Kong and expressed their determination to carry out the agreement in full. They also discussed a wide range of international issues including SDI, arms control, East-West relations, Taiwan, Kampuchea, and North Korea, and signed two agreements: to improve economic cooperation by expanding exchanges involving technology transfer, manufacturing equipment, and products in a wide-range of sectors (effective 1 January 1986-31 December 1990) with automatic extension for another year if within 6 months prior to expiry neither side notifies in writing the other side that the agreement is void); and to promote nuclear cooperation in civil, nonsensitive fields (effective upon signing and remaining in force for 15 years unless one side notifies the other in writing of termination of the agreement 1 year in advance). Zhao also met with opposition party leaders and parliamentarians.

On 4 June Zhao and Vice Premier Tian Jiyun met British Secretary of State for Trade and Industry Norman Tebbit and a group of British industrialists and financiers. Zhao said bankers and entrepreneurs are welcome to do business with China, make investments, or set up factories. He said he would like to see a rapid development in Sino-British trade and that the two countries should increase their imports from each other. Zhao met Secretary of State for Energy Peter Walker; they exchanged views on the promotion of economic and technological cooperation and other issues of mutual concern. Gan Ziyu, Ling Zongtong, and Jia Shi met with British industrialists to discuss Sino-British economic and technological cooperation in the fields of telecommunications, coal preparation, nuclear power preparing, nuclear power, and the auto industry. The Chinese delegation expressed a desire to import more British equipment and machinery of good quality at competitive prices and recommended technology transfer and compensation trade as major means of cooperation. That same day Wu Xueqian called on Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe to discuss Hong Kong and a wide range of international issues, including East-West relations and arms control.

Zhao next flew to Edinburgh, the first Chinese premier to visit Scotland. He toured an engineering group specializing in the design and manufacture of underground mining machinery and an electronics industrial (computer graphics) group.

On 6 June, Zhao addressed the British Royal Institute of International Affairs and said the Chinese Government steadfastly pursues an independent foreign policy of peace. He said relations between North and South should be equal, mutually beneficial and complementary, and that the North-South relationship is both economic and political. Zhao said the UK, the EC, and other West European countries can play a positive role in establishing a new international economic order though he was unsure about how to achieve this restructuring through negotiations.

At a luncheon in his honor given by Queen Elizabeth II, Zhao said he was delighted the Queen would visit China next year. Later that day Zhao and Thatcher met for talks on economic relations, trade, and technological cooperation. Both sides expressed the wish to hold more detailed talks on trade matters. Negotiations are underway for an investment protection agreement.

At a press conference on 8 June, Zhao said his visit "is a success and has met our expectations," and that he and Thatcher reached "extensively identical or similar views" on the relaxation of international tension, maintenance of world peace, and a series of other international issues of common concern. Satisfied with recent bilateral developments, they agreed that the signing of the joint declaration on the question of Hong Kong "opened new vistas for the development of Sino-British relations to a new high."

Commenting on a demonstration of Tibetans living in Britain, Zhao said it was "meaningless" and that Tibet had always been part of China.

Zhao and his party arrived in Bonn on 8 June for four rounds of talks with Chancellor Helmut Kohl. The talks proceeded in a "very friendly and cordial atmosphere" and both leaders said they desired "a deeper and closer relationship in all fields, including economic and technological cooperation and cultural exchange, on the basis of durable stability."

It was announced that German industry will accept 150 Chinese college graduates for scholarships to study and work in the FRG for 18 months; the first 50 scholars are expected in 1985.

On 10 June China and the FRG signed two agreements and a memorandum for increasing economic cooperation. The first agreement, on the avoidance of double taxation on income and capital, is expected to encourage West German investment in China and help promote bilateral economic cooperation. After ratification, the agreement is retroactive from 1 January 1985, and the regulations for interest rates and license fees will come into force on 1 July 1985. The second agreement, a protocol, extends the 1979 economic cooperation agreement for another 10 years beginning in 1985. The FRG Ministry of Economic Cooperation said that of DM50 million, DM45 million will be made available in the form of soft loans to be used to modernize and extend industrial enterprises and DM5 million will be contributed to a fund to finance students and experts. FRG-PRC trade will be increased from $2.2 million to $4 million by 1990. The memorandum between the FRG's Kraftwerk Union (KWU) and the Chinese Government on the possible construction of four nuclear power units with 1,000-megawatt pressurized water reactors represents a declaration of intent for delivery to China. Prior to final allocation of the contract, agreement needs to be reached on delivery, price, financing, and other conditions, such as the possible disposal of FRG nuclear "waste" in China.

On 10 June Zhao and Kohl met again, and expressed their common desire to increase economic and technological cooperation, cultural exchange, and trade and also discussed international issues of common concern reaching consensus on a wide range of issues. Vice Premier Tian met with Finance Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg; they exchanged experiences in managing macroeconomy and briefed each other on economic development in their countries. Foreign Minister Wu and Hans-Dietrich Genscher met to discuss "all issues of foreign and security policy." Zhao addressed the Congress of Industry and Commerce of the FRG on China's open-door policy, economic restructuring, and trade expansion. He said China is ready to "carry out long term cooperation with Western Europe in expanding two-way trade, introducing foreign technology and equipment, making use of foreign funds, seeking consulting services, training technicians, managerial personnel, and so on." China hopes ". . . European countries will be more competitive in the prices of their products and more liberal in technology transfer and offer more favorable terms of payment."

At a press conference in Bonn on 11 June, Zhao, queried on the competition between France and the FRG in the sale of a nuclear power station to China, said China is cooperating with both countries. On 12 June, Zhao held talks with Martin Bangemann, Chairman of the Free Democratic Party, on economic and technological cooperation, particularly between small- and medium-sized enterprises and between Chinese provinces and Federal German lands. Zhao also talked with Jutta Dittfurt, spokesman for the Green Party; the two sides agreed they have much in common concerning the question of peace. In Hamburg, Mayor Klaus von Dohanyi said his city and Shanghai will sign a cooperation agreement to facilitate exchanges in economy and culture. Zhao visited the Messerschmitt-Boelkow-Blohm company (MBB) which manufactures the Airbus 310. MBB Transport Aircraft Group for China made the Airbus 310-200 and according to the company, China has ordered three to be in service by the end of June 1985 on Chinese domestic routes.

On 13 June Zhao exchanged views with Minister-President Franz-Josef Strauss on further economic and technological cooperation between China and the FRG. He also visited the Perlach Research Center of Siemens, which is cooperating with Chinese counterparts in power engineering, telecommunications, and medical engineering.

Zhao, the first Chinese premier to visit the Netherlands, arrived in Rotterdam on 16 June. On 17 June Zhao and Dutch Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers signed an agreement to encourage reciprocal investment between their two countries. Both countries pledged to extend and intensify their economic relations and to encourage investments by creating stable and favorable conditions for such investments; the agreement will be in force 10 years. Zhao said he hoped an agreement on nuclear cooperation and another ending double taxation would also be signed. The two leaders spoke of strengthening economic ties, North-South relations, and increasing cultural ties. Zhao commended the current cooperation between the two countries and alluded only indirectly to the sale of Dutch submarines to Taiwan in 1981. China and the Netherlands also signed an agreement in principle with Philips for the formation of a joint venture company to manufacture color television tubes in China.

On 17 June Zhao held friendly and cordial conversations with Dutch parliamentary leaders. Wu Xueqian met Hans van den Broek to discuss international issues of common concern, including East-West relations, disarmament and the situation in Southeast Asia. Tian Jiyun met with his counterpart, Deputy Prime Minister and Minister of Economic Affairs Gijs van Aardenne, to discuss current and future cooperation projects. China and the Netherlands agreed to increase contacts between diplomatic officials of the two countries. Zhao said "bilateral contacts between China and the Netherlands are increasing. . ."

On 18 June Zhao met with more than 30 leading Dutch industrialists and businessmen welcoming them to carry out multi-form cooperation and to set up enterprises in China with exclusive foreign investment. He said he hoped the Netherlands would further increase its competitiveness in terms of prices, technology transfer, and loans to create more opportunities for Dutch products and technology to enter the Chinese market. China is willing to cooperate in various fields such as water conservancy, port construction, animal husbandry, processing agricultural and sideline products, and agriculture. On 19 June, Tian Jiyun inspected the Fokker Aircraft Company's Amsterdam plant. He said China was interested in exploring possibilities for cooperation.

Summary

Premier Zhao Ziyang's trip to the United Kingdom, the Federal Republic of Germany, and the Netherlands (2-19 June 1985) "represents another major diplomatic action in China's efforts to seek peace and independence." Although it was noted at each stop that international issues of common concern were discussed, the trip was geared toward further developing the trade and economic relations necessary to help China's modernization drive. To this end, Zhao and his party met with high-level economic officials and representatives of industrial, trade, and technological circles. The visit also highlighted the signing of economic-oriented agreements. In the UK, agreements were signed on economic cooperation and on nuclear cooperation in civil, nonsensitive fields. The instruments of ratification for the Sino-British joint declaration on Hong Kong were also exchanged. In the FRG, an agreement on the avoidance of double taxation on income and capital, an economic cooperation agreement, and a memorandum on nuclear power cooperation were signed. In the Netherlands, an agreement to encourage reciprocal investment was signed. Zhao also made a stopover in the United Arab Emirates en route to Western Europe, and a stopover in Pakistan on his way home to China.

Bilateral Issues

China will exert itself to develop its economic and technological cooperation and trade as well as cultural and other exchanges with the UK to substantiate its good political relations.

Bilateral Issues

The settlement of the Hong Kong issue has opened a new page in the annals of Sino-British relations.

Bilateral Issues

China seeks a steady development of Sino-US relations on the basis of observing the mutual agreements by both sides.

Bilateral Issues

China hopes to see the normalization of Sino-Soviet relations through removal of existing obstacles; particularly those which threaten China's security.

Bilateral Issues

An important part of China's foreign policy is to strengthen its friendly ties and cooperation with the FRG; such cooperation is conducive to the maintenance of world peace and its significance is beyond the scope of bilateral relations. The FRG is a friend and major trade partner and "there has been fruitful economic and technical cooperation between the two countries."

Bilateral Issues

China is appreciative of the Dutch Government's effort to overcome the obstruction to Sino-Dutch relations and promote friendship and cooperation with China. China will develop long-term and stable economic cooperation with the Netherlands based on equality and mutual benefit.

Strategic Issues

China is for disarmament, the complete prohibition and thorough destruction of nuclear weapons, and is against the arms race, particularly the nuclear arms race, and the extension of this race to outer space. China welcomes the resumption of arms talks between the US and USSR.

Strategic Issues

China strives to develop relations with all other countries on the basis of the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence and will not let its relations with other countries, whether close or estranged, hinge on their social systems and ideologies.

Strategic Issues

China will maintain her independence at all times and in all circumstances. In international affairs, China's attitudes will be based on the merits of each case and China will not enter into an alliance or a strategic relationship with any big power or with one against another. China will never seek hegemony.

Strategic Issues

"Strengthening our unity and cooperation with other Third World countries is a cornerstone for our diplomatic work." China is trying to promote the improvement of North-South relations and strengthening South-South cooperation.

Strategic Issues

The two issues of global significance in today's world are relations between the East and the West and those between the South and the North.

Strategic Issues

China will strive to solve the Taiwan question in accordance with the concept of "one country, two systems."

Strategic Issues

German national reunification should be solved through patient consultations among the Germans themselves and in the interest of both Germanies and peace in Europe.

Strategic Issues

China appreciates the efforts of West European countries in joining forces to protect their own security and develop their economy. A strong, united Europe which takes its destiny in its own hand is an important force of maintaining peace--and so is China.

Reciprocal

German Chancellor Helmut Kohl visited China in 1974 and October 1984.

Reciprocal

German President Richard von Weizsacker reaffirmed his invitation to Li Xiannian to visit the FRG.

Reciprocal

Foreign Minister Wu Xueqian invited Foreign Minister Genscher to visit China in November 1985; he accepted.

Reciprocal

German Minister President Franz Josef Strauss will visit China for the fourth time in October 1985.

Reciprocal

British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher visited China in September 1982 and December 1984.

Reciprocal

British Queen Elizabeth II has accepted an invitation to visit China; the trip may take place in the second half of 1986.

Analysis

Chen Muhua departed Beijing for Nairobi on 11 July to attend the world conference to review and appraise the United Nations (UN) Decade for Women (15-26 July 1985). Huang Ganying, a deputy head of the delegation departed Beijing on 4 July to attend the conference's preparatory sessions. Wei Yongqing, another deputy delegation head, and also the Chinese Ambassador to Kenya, was already in Nairobi.

On 12 July, Zhu Meide, from the All-China's Women's Federation addressed the UN Women's Conference. She told the audience that the Constitution and Chinese legislation stipulate women enjoy equal rights with men in all areas-- political, economic, social, cultural, and family life.

On 16 July Chen Muhua visited the residence of the Egyptian delegation and met with Suzanne Mubarak, its head and wife of Egyptian President Husni Mubarak. Chen said as China and Egypt are both ancient civilized countries and maintain close relations, the friendly relations between women of the two countries would further develop through cooperation at the conference.

On 16 July Guan Minqian spoke at a Chinese workshop on women. She said China's development and prosperity cannot be realized without the full participation of women since "women hold up half of the sky." She briefed the delegates on the status of women in China since the founding of the PRC.

On 17 July Chen addressed the conference and spoke on world peace, UN endeavors in that regard, and on China's policy to bring about equality of women and men. She said peace is a question of the first magnitude the world faces today and that without peace, there could be no development of equality between the sexes. She praised UN efforts to enhance women's status and promote equality between women and men.

At an 18 July meeting with Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi, Chen said Moi's September 1980 visit to China opened a new stage in friendly relations between the two countries. She expressed her appreciation for the efforts of President Moi and the Kenyan Government to bring about a successful opening of the world women's conference.

At 19 July press conference Chen Muhua said Chinese women, who once played an important role in the Chinese revolution, now play an increasingly important role in socialist construction for modernization. However, they still face an arduous task in improving their lots. Chen left Nairobi on 22 July (prior to the end of the conference) to return to China.

Summary

As State Councillor and an Alternate Member of the Chinese Communist Party Political Bureau, Chen Muhua headed China's delegation to the world conference to review and appraise the United Nations Decade for Women (15-26 July 1985). Although the conference focussed on women's issues, Chen also used the forum to expound China's views on the question of peace and its relationship to women, the arms race, and the superpowers. She also met separately with Suzanne Mubarak, wife of the Egyptian President, and head of Egypt's delegation to the conference and Kenyan President Daniel arap Moi. Other Chinese delegates discussed the situation of women in China--stressing their contributions and that they enjoy equal rights with men. Chen departed Nairobi on 22 July, prior to the end of the conference.

Bilateral Issues

China and Egypt are both ancient civilized countries maintaining close relations. The friendly relations between the women of the two countries will further develop through cooperation during the conference.

Bilateral Issues

China cherishes Kenya's friendship and will do its utmost to further promote relations.

Strategic Issues

The Chinese delegation hopes to enhance friendship, learn from others, promote international cooperation, and safeguard world peace. The delegation hopes to get together with delegates from various countries and jointly appraise the achievements of the UN Decade for Women as well as major issues of concern to the women of the world such as equality, peace, and development.

Strategic Issues

Women of all countries have rights and reasons to call on the two superpowers to enter into serious negotiations on disarmament and to work out agreements that do not infringe on the interest of other countries.1

Strategic Issues

Kampuchea, Afghanistan, Namibia, South Africa, Central America and Palestine are "hotspots" of the world that evolve into international crises either as the direct result of superpower aggression or because of their intervention and manipulation.

Analysis On 21 June 1984, State Councillor and Minister in Charge, State Planning Commission Song Ping led a delegation to Madagascar for a 6-day visit. The delegation attended celebrations of the 10th anniversary of the socialist revolution and the 25th anniversary of independence in Madagascar. Song met with Head of the Malagasy Government Didier Ratsiraka and President of the National People's Assembly L.X.M. Andrianarahinjaka and visited Madagascar's largest port, Tamatave. Song conveyed a message from Chinese President Li Xiannian to Li's Malagasy counterpart Ratsiraka. The two sides discussed strengthening economic and technical cooperation and called Sino-Malagasy cooperation "exemplary."

The delegation arrived in Mauritius on 27 July 1985 for a 4-day visit. Chinese and Mauritian officials met for the first round of talks of the Sino-Mauritian Mixed Committee on Economy and Trade despite an AFP report in June that the visit and talks were cancelled due to a visit to Taiwan made by Prime Minister Jugnauth. During the talks the two sides agreed there are broad prospects exist for cooperation between their two countries. At the conclusion of the talks, letters were exchanged and two agreements signed providing Mauritius with an interest-free loan to finance projects including a stadium. China will also provide credits for goods and a technical study on stadium construction.

Analysis

Vice Premier Yao Yilin paid an official visit to the Soviet Union from 9-16 July 1985 focussing on economic and trade relations. Yao's visit was a follow-up to the China visit of First Deputy Chairman of the USSR Council of Ministers Ivan Arkhipov in December 1984. In Moscow Yao and his delegation held talks with Arkhipov and signed a goods exchange and payments agreement for 1986-1990 as well as an agreement on economic and technological cooperation in building and upgrading Chinese industrial projects. It was also announced that the first meeting of the Sino-Soviet Economic, Trade, Scientific and Technological Cooperation Commission would be held during the first half of 1986 in Beijing. Under the long-term trade agreement, trade is expected to total $1.8 billion this year and $3.5 billion by 1990. The industrial cooperation plan reportedly provides for Soviet assistance in building 7 new plants and modernizing 17 others in the fields of electric power, metals, machinery, coal, chemicals, and transport. Some of the factories to be refurbished were originally built with Soviet aid in the 1950s. At a welcoming luncheon, Yao expressed gratitude to the Soviet Union for its contributions to China's revolution and construction, and regret that the two countries went through a period of drifting apart.

The highest-ranking Soviet official Yao met was Chairman of the Council of Ministers Nikolay A. Tikhonov. In addition to expressing satisfaction with the recent rapid development of Sino-Soviet economic ties, Yao mentioned that the three obstacles still exist in the way of normalizing political relations. Tikhonov reiterated Soviet willingness to improve relations with China and expressed Soviet positions on contemporary international affairs. The presence of Vice Minister of Foreign Affairs Qian Qichen in Yao's delegation implies that political issues may have been discussed more than the press coverage suggests, but reports do not indicate any progress on political or party-to-party issues.

In addition to formal talks, Yao and his party laid a wreath at the Lenin Mausoleum, attended a ballet, met with Chinese students in Moscow, and visited local officials and industries in the Ukraine and Novosibirsk, Siberia before returning to China.

Summary

Vice Premier Yao Yilin led an economic and trade delegation to the Soviet Union from 9-16 July 1985. A long-term trade agreement for 1986-1990 was signed which will almost double the total trade volume by 1990. In addition, a long-awaited agreement for Soviet assistance in building and refurbishing industrial enterprises was signed. It was announced that the first meeting of the Sino-Soviet Economic, Trade, and Scientific and Technological Cooperation Commission would be held in Beijing during the first half of 1986. Political relations were not emphasized during Yao's visit, but the cordial atmosphere of First Deputy Chairman of the Council of Ministers Ivan Arkhipov's China visit in December 1984 was continued.

Bilateral Issues

A foundation has been laid for long-term trade and scientific and technological cooperation.

Bilateral Issues

China and the Soviet Union are two great neighboring nations sharing traditional friendship.

Bilateral Issues

The fact that China and the Soviet Union drifted apart in the past is regrettable.

Strategic Issues

A peaceful international environment is necessary for China's goal of socialist modernization.

Reciprocal

First Vice Chairman, Council of Ministers Ivan V. Arkhipov visited China in December 1984.

Analysis

State Councillor Gu Mu led a nine-member delegation of economic and foreign affairs ministers for talks with their Japanese counterparts on trade, technology, and international issues (29 July-11 August 1985.)

Gu Mu and his high-level delegation travelled to Japan for the fourth in a series of Sino-Japanese ministerial-level talks since 1980. The formal talks were held 30-31 July 1985, with additional related meetings taking place in early August. The talks were "frank," "friendly," and "fruitful," and both sides faced problems squarely--confident in their resolution. Gu remained in Japan after most of the delegation returned to Beijing (probably 3 August) for an additional friendly visit before departing 11 August.

The central issue addressed in the 2-day talks was China's dissatisfaction with the soaring trade imbalance in Japan's favor. During the first half of 1985, the imbalance already reached a record high of $2.8 billion, compared with $1.3 billion for the whole of 1984. China's trade deficit with Japan is 72 percent of its total trade deficit. Gu and other officials urged Japan to correct the imbalance by: 1) increasing imports from China, 2) expanding the number of joint ventures (currently only 5.7 percent of China's joint ventures), 3) concluding an investment protection pact to increase Japanese investors' confidence, and 4) increasing technology transfers, especially for medium- and small-sized enterprises. For its part, China will try to improve the quality of its products to satisfy Japanese consumers and to loosen rigid Chinese commercial rules which discourage foreign investors.

In response, on the first day of formal meetings, Japan announced new measures to open its market to foreign imports, such as reducing tariffs on almost 2,000 items. Japanese officials explained that this year's abnormally high trade imbalance with China is due to temporary factors related to agreements signed the previous year. In addition to the new import policy, Sino-Japanese trade will benefit from two agreements formalized during the talks: a bilateral pact on the peaceful use of nuclear energy which opens the door for Japanese sales of nuclear power plant technology to China, and a Japanese low-interest loan package of up to 75.1 billion yen to help finance Chinese railway and telephone construction projects.

Both sides also made numerous proposals for increased cooperation. In fiscal year 1986, Japan plans to appoint a diplomat to the Japanese Embassy in Beijing to be in charge of scientific cooperation. Japan also offered China corporate accounting expertise and proposed establishing trading houses in China. China requested that Japan provide financing and foreign exchange experts to train Chinese counterparts and suggested joint research on corn, soybeans, and animal husbandry. China asked for increased cooperation on infrastructure projects, ship scrapping, industrial research, and assistance in setting up a patent filing system. China asked Japan to select three appropriate cities to cooperate with Qingdao, Wuxi, and Yantai and also requested an increase in the number of Chinese management trainees studying in Japan from 20-30 to 200.

Although the focus of the ministerial talks was economic, there was also a political dimension. The Chinese and Japanese Foreign Ministers held talks on international and bilateral issues, including the United States, the Soviet Union, the Korean Peninsula, Indochina, the Middle East, and the Strategic Defense Initiative. Japanese Foreign Minister Abe proposed holding regular foreign ministerial meetings which Chinese Foreign Minister Wu said was a "very good idea."

Summary

Gu Mu, State Councillor and Member, Secretariat, Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, led a delegation of economic and foreign affairs ministers to Japan (29 July-11 August 1985) for the fourth in a series of Sino-Japanese ministerial talks since 1980. Talks focussed on the Japanese trade imbalance and ways to expand economic and technical cooperation.

Bilateral Issues

Japan and China should consider the future and be bold in handling trade matters.

Bilateral Issues

Sino-Japanese talks will contribute to good-neighborly relations and economic and technological cooperation.

Bilateral Issues

Progress in Sino-Japanese economic relations has failed to keep pace with progress in political relations.

Strategic Issues

Sino-Japanese cooperation will help safeguard peace in the world.

Strategic Issues

World tension has relaxed somewhat since the resumption of the US-USSR Geneva talks, but the danger of war still exists.

Strategic Issues

China opposes the militarization of outer space by both the United States' Strategic Defense Initiative and the Soviet Union's similar program.

Reciprocal

The three previous Sino-Japanese ministerial meetings were held in December 1980, December 1981, and September 1983.

Reciprocal

Japanese Director General, Science and Technology Agency Reiichi Takeuchi plans to visit China in September 1985.

Reciprocal

Japanese Minister of International Trade and Industry Keijiro Murata plans to visit China in September 1985.

Reciprocal

Japanese Foreign Minister Shintaro Abe accepted an invitation to visit China, possibly in October 1985.

Analysis

Kang Shi'en made a two-country Latin American tour stopping first in Lima, Peru (28-30 July 1985) as the official Chinese Government envoy to the presidential mandate transfer ceremony at the invitation of the Peruvian Government. He next paid a goodwill visit to Chile (30 July-2 August 1985), at the invitation of the Chilean Government. Kang was the highest level Chinese official to visit Chile since 1973.

On 28 July, Kang attended the inaugural ceremony for President Garcia. On 30 July, accompanied by Chinese Ambassador to Peru Yang Mai, Kang was received by Garcia who expressed his wish to strengthen ties between Peru and China. Garcia, as leader of the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance, visited China in July 1984. Kang left for Chile on the 30th.

On 31 July, despite what the local media implied was an interruption of Pinochet's "busy presidential agenda," Kang met with the Chilean President and Foreign Minister at La Moneda Palace. Chilean sources reported only that Kang had expressed his desire to promote bilateral cooperation and friendship on the basis of the Five Principles of Peaceful Coexistence. Xinhua added that Pinochet also had expressed hopes for further friendly relations and cooperation in economic and cultural matters. Agence France Presse reported from Santiago that Kang met with Chilean economic and political authorities and that Chile is interested in buying Chinese crude oil and is studying ways to install some minipower plants in southern Chile.

Record: 33 (continued)Summary

The delegation to Peru and Chile, while headed by a high-level Chinese official of waning political importance, was pro forma at best. The Peruvian segment served only the ceremonial purpose of attending a presidential inauguration. Although also officially invited to visit Chile, Kang sought to offset China's $120 million trade deficit with Chile encouraging imports. The relationship between China and Chile can best be described as a low-key bilateral one between a major Communist nation and one of the world's most conservative military juntas.

Bilateral Issues

Peruvian President Garcia expressed hopes for strengthened ties between Peru and China.

Bilateral Issues

Chilean President Pinochet expressed hopes for further development of bilateral economic and cultural ties.

Analysis

President Li Xiannian made a first-ever 20-day visit to North America by a Chinese head of state. He toured

Canada from 11 to 21 July and the United States from 21 to 31 July.

Li visited sites in Vancouver, British Columbia from 11 to 14 July followed by his arrival in Ottawa on 14 July. He held talks on 15 July with Governor General Sauve on political ties and the development of economic and trade relations, and with Prime Minister Mulroney on major international issues on which both China and Canada held identical or similar views. Li stated that there is no fundamental conflict of interests between China and Canada.

From 17 to 19 July, Li and his party visited Quebec City where talks were held with Acting Premier Bedard on improving economic cooperation between Quebec Province and China. Meetings also were held with local industrial and business leaders on possibilities of cooperation in such fields as hydropower stations, telecommunications, railways and pulp and paper. The industrialists and businessmen were invited to visit China. While in Quebec President Li visited the Port of Quebec and Vice Premier Li toured a hydroelectric plant where he mentioned that there were "broad prospects" for cooperation between China and Canada in hydroelectric construction.

From 19 to 21 July, the delegation visited Toronto for talks with federal and provincial officials. In talks with Ontario Premier Peterson it was noted there is great interest in economic cooperation between Ontario and China and preparatory work is already under way for cooperative relations between Ontario and Jiangsu Province in the areas of trade, technology exchange, energy, food processing, nuclear power and electronic software. Vice Premier Li held a round-table discussion with Toronto businessmen noting that the US$7 million trade deficit in favor of Canada stands in the way of further development of bilateral trade. Discussions with Ontario government officials highlighted the possibility of Canadian industrialists participating in the construction of a large hydraulic power station at the Three Gorges of the Changjiang River and collaboration in the field of aircraft industry.

Highlights of Li's Canada visit included the gift of giant pandas "Qingqing" and "Quangquan" to Toronto and a tour of Canada Dixie Systems, Ltd, in Ottawa, a company specialized in advanced display and processing technology for image analysis, and a ribbon cutting ceremony to mark the shipment of the company's products to China. Vice Premier Li and Trade Minister Kelleher signed documents on the 16th renewing the original 1973 China-Canada Trade Agreement and Ambassador Yu and Wheat Minister Mayer signed documents establishing a consultative committee on agriculture. Li Peng noted at the signing ceremony there are favorable conditions for further development of trade and the promotion of cooperation in agriculture but warned again about the large trade deficit on the Chinese side. As a result of talks with Kelleher, Li announced China will hold a trade fair in Canada as a way to introduce more Chinese products to Canada. Vice Minister Zhu and foreign trade representative Wang Pingqing held talks with their Canadian counterparts (Gordon Smith and John Hadwen) centering on international and bilateral issues respectively. In Quebec Vice Premier Li met with the presidents of nine universities and in Toronto he visited a suburban nuclear power plant and a provincial hydropower and nuclear power plant training center.

After an overnight trip through Niagara Falls on 21-22 July, which included a visit by Li Peng to the Moses Power Station on the US side, Li and his party arrived in Washington, D.C. on 22 July to begin a 10-day state visit. Talks centering on bilateral relations were held with President Reagan for 25 minutes on the 23rd. The Chinese side raised the Taiwan issue as the "main snag" in China-US relations and emphasized the need for continued efforts to settle this major difference. Bilateral economic and trade relations were deemed "good" by President Li. As a sign of improved relations President Reagan agreed to sign the US-China Nuclear Cooperation Agreement. This and another agreement on educational exchanges were signed by Li Peng and Energy Secretary Herrington and Secretary of State Shultz, respectively. Ji Pengfei and USIA Director Wick signed a cultural exchanges accord and Han Xu and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Wolfe signed a fishery agreement. On 24 July, Li Xiannian met with US Congressional leaders and in response to the statement that both US political parties are for better relations with China, said that the two countries should maintain good relations and should not quarrel with each other. At a 24 July National Council for US-China Trade luncheon, Li declared that relations will be sustained and show stable progress as long as both sides strictly abide by the principles jointly set forth in the three Sino-US communiques. On the afternoon of 24 July, President Li met for 50 minutes with Defense Secretary Weinberger who told Li that building enduring relations with China is "one of the six main pillars" of US Asian policy. It was reported later that the question of US arms sales to China was taken up in this discussion. Also on 24 July, Li Peng held talks with Vice President Bush and Energy Secretary Herrington on furthering cooperation in economy, technology and trade and Sino-US cooperation in the fields of nuclear and hydroelectric power. Li Peng encouraged the United States to make efforts to reduce the trade imbalance in the Chinese side so that bilateral trade can develop further.

Prior to his departure from Washington, President Li gave an interview to ABC in which he said the visit had been "proceeding smoothly," that he found China and the US "have much in common" and could overcome differences through joint efforts, gave reassurances about China's nuclear proliferation stand, said China "will not send any of [its] Armed Forces to Taiwan" and would protect any foreign countries' legitimate economic interests there.

On 25 July the Chinese delegation arrived in Chicago, a visit chosen because its being a major US industrial area with numerous trade opportunities. On the 25th, Vice Premier Li visited the Braidwood Nuclear Power Station accompanied by Energy Secretary Herrington. On the 26th, President Li was received by Illinois Governor Thompson who expressed willingness to further expand economic and trade relations between his state and China. The same day he visited the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and other local sites. Li Peng visited a local Ford Motor Company plant, a visit that was said to help promote further business contacts between Ford and Chinese counterparts. On the 27th the delegation participated in the inauguration of the new Chinese Consulate General in Chicago.

President Li's party arrived in Los Angeles on 27 July while Vice Premier Li's group went by a chartered US Air Force plane and a US Army barge to see the inland waterway navigation system of the Mississippi River. He also stopped at Nellis Air Force Base and Hoover Dam. In California, President Li visited Disneyland on the 28th and was feted at routine social functions. On 28 July, Li Peng visited Stanford University and the McDonnell-Douglas Corporation where 150 Chinese technicians are working. On the 29th, President Li and Vice Premier Li toured the Jet Propulsion Laboratory where he was greeted by NASA's Chinese-American Shuttlenaut Taylor Wang.

The delegation arrived in Honolulu on the 29th. On the 30th, Li Xiannian toured Pearl Harbor and the Iolani School where Sun Yat-sen once studied. The delegation departed for home on 31 July.

Summary

The two-country North American visit by President Li Xiannian between 11 and 31 July had the purpose of confirming already agreed upon issues and accords in both countries. It was a first-ever Chinese head of state visit to either Canada or the United States and was important for having given relatively wide exposure to Vice Premier Li Peng. During the course of the visit trade renewal and agricultural consultation agreements were signed with Canada. Agreements on nuclear cooperation, cultural exchanges, educational cooperation and exchanges, and fishery were signed with the United States. In line with the interest shown in both Canadian

Analysis

Qian Liren led a delegation of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) Central Committee International Liaison Department to Portugal (19-27 June 1985) and Iraq (27-3 July 1985).

Qian and his party were invited to Portugal by the Portuguese Communist Party (PCP)--the first direct contact between the two communist parties in 20 years. The Chinese delegation "acquainted itself directly with Portuguese reality and the PCP's activity, paying study visits and holding information meetings" in the Lisbon, Oporto, Setubal, and Evora districts, and met with delegations from their respective national organizations.

The Chinese delegation held a working session with the PCP's Lisbon Regional Executive. The PCP issued a note calling the contacts between the two parties a resumption of relations (which were severed with the 1960 ideological rift between the Chinese and Soviet Communist parties). On 24 June, Qian and his delegation met with Alvaro Cunhal, PCP General Secretary. They exchanged information and opinions about the situations in their countries, activities of their parties, international problems, and matters related to relations between the two parties. Talks and meetings were held in an atmosphere of comradeship, frankness and cordiality. Both sides considered the visit useful, positive, and an important contribution to improving mutual understanding. The two sides agreed to continue the exchange of information and views in appropriate ways to be specified in due course. The CCP delegation invited the PCP delegation to visit China; they accepted in principle--the visit to be determined at a suitable time.

Qian and his delegation arrived in Baghdad on 27 June at the invitation of the Arab Ba'th Socialist Party. On 28 June Qian's delegation and its Iraqi counterpart held talks on the current international situation and other issues of common concern as well as relations between the two parties. Both sides briefed each other on the domestic situation in their respective countries and expressed satisfaction over the steady development of relations between the two parties in recent years. Qian said relations between China and Iraq have always been good and this visit will further enhance relations between the two parties and two countries.

On 29 June, Qian met with Taha Yasin Ramadan; they reviewed friendly bilateral relations, ways to promote them, and developments in the Iranian aggression against Iraq. The following day, Qian met with Tariq 'Aziz, member of the national leadership of the Arab Ba'th Socialist Party and concurrently Iraqi Foreign Minister who said his party was satisfied with the development of relations with the CCP and that the current visit would only help improve friendly relations between the two parties. They also discussed relations between the two friendly countries and parties and developments in the Iraqi-Iranian war. Qian said he was confident the friendly relations between the two parties will further develop through common efforts.

Summary

Qian Liren, Head of the International Liaison Department, Chinese Communist Party, visited Portugal and Iraq (19 June-3 July 1985) at the

Contacts Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone

Analysis

A delegation from the China-Japan Friendship Association, headed by its honorary President Wang Zhen, paid a goodwill visit to Japan (13-26 July 1985) to unveil a peace statue donated by China. The statue is a present from China, fulfilling a promise made by CCP leader Hu Yaobang, during his 1983 Japan tour. After the delegation departed, Wang remained in Japan to head a delegation from the China Association for International Friendly Contacts (1-10 August 1985).

On 16 July, the statue "China girl" was unveiled in Nagasaki. Wang said the statue is an example of the friendship between the Chinese and Japanese peoples and will inspire strenuous work for the peace of mankind. Wang visited the Koyaki shipyard and the museum of ancient China, and attended a luncheon at the museum hosted by the local Overseas Chinese society. The delegation is to depart Nagasaki on 18 July for a visit to Hokkaido.

On 18 July Wang was the guest of honor at a reception in Sapporo. Wang reviewed his visit to Hokkaido 28 years ago and said Sino-Hokkaido contacts and cooperation are developing and good results are expected. Wang and his unidentified delegation toured Hokkaido on 19 and 20 July, visiting Machimura and Yuasa pastures, and the Hokkaido Exploration Memorial Hall.

On 20 July the delegation departed for Tokyo where they toured Japan's 1985 science exposition at Tsukuba. At a banquet given by Governor of Ibaraki, Takeuchi Fujio on 21 July, Wang was awarded the title of honorary citizen of Ibaraki. The following day the Japan-China Friendship Association and the Japanese Soka Association held separate banquets to welcome the visiting Chinese delegation. Japanese dignitaries including former Prime Minister Zenko Suzuki and former Foreign Minister Lichiro Hatoyama attended the banquet given by the Japan-China Friendship Association. Wang was awarded a cultural prize at the Japanese Soka Association banquet.

On 24 July, Wang met with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone. Wang, his granddaughter Jingchuang, and Li Heng, Hu Yaobang's daughter, lunched with Nakasone. Xinhua reported from Tokyo on 26 July that the Sino-Japanese Friendship Association delegation left for home though Wang Zhen remained in Japan to head a delegation from the China Association for International Friendly Contacts.

The delegation from the China Association for International Friendly Contacts arrived in Tokyo on 1 August at the invitation of Japan's Asian Interchange Association. On 2 August Wang Zhen, as honorary president of the association, addressed the grand reception of Japan's Asia Interchange Association. He said the Chinese people are a peace-loving people, China's ongoing construction needs peace, and peace favors stability in Asia. He also welcomed Japanese entrepreneurs' active long-term cooperation with China in various economic and technological fields. The Chinese delegation departed Tokyo on 10 August after establishing friendly contacts with people and visiting various companies and factories in cities including Tokyo, Nagasaki, and Kyoto.

Summary

Wang Zhen's stay in Japan was for a dual purpose. As Honorary President of the China-Japan Friendship Association he led a delegation to Japan (15-26 July 1985) to present the sculpture "China girl." As Honorary President of the China Association for International Friendly Contacts he led its delegation (1-10 August 1985) to attend a meeting of Japan's Asian Interchange Association. Both visits can be considered friendship visits. The Japanese press did not report on the second visit and gave limited press coverage to the first.

Bilateral Issues

Sino-Japanese friendship benefits not only the two nations, but also world peace.

Bilateral Issues

Japanese entrepreneurs are welcome to actively enter long-term economic and technological cooperation with China.

Strategic Issues

China can make greater contributions to maintaining world peace by stimulating and diversifying its economy and opening to the outside world.

Strategic Issues

Not only Japan and China, but also the entire world seek peace.

Analysis

Zhang Aiping, State Councillor and Minister of National Defense paid a goodwill visit to Pakistan (27 June-4 July 1985), Romania (4-15 July 1985), and Portugal (15-22 July 1985).

Zhang is the first Chinese Minister of National Defense to visit Pakistan. He met Prime Minister and concurrently Defense Minister Mohammad Khan Junejo, and high-ranking Pakistani Army officials; they exchanged views on the present status of bilateral relations. Zhang said relations between China and Pakistan have stood the test of time and set an example of good neighborliness. He added that relations between the two governments, peoples, and armed forces will be further strengthened with the passage of time. Zhang said Pakistan's stand on the Afghanistan issue and its large amount of assistance for Afghan refugees are appreciated all over the world on humanitarian grounds.

Zhang was received by President Zia-ul-Haq at the Murree resort on 28 June. Zia gave a dinner for Zhang attended by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Committee Rahimuddin Khan and other senior Pakistani military and government officials. Zhang hosted a return banquet to express his thanks for the warm reception accorded him by the Pakistani Government and Armed Forces.

On 30 June, Zhang held talks with Foreign Minister Sahabzada Yaqub Khan and exchanged views on the world and regional situation and matters of mutual interest; they noted complete identity of views. Zhang and members of his entourage next visited the headquarters of the air defense command and the National Defense College in Rawalpindi, and were briefed on Pakistan's air defense system. During his visit, Zhang met with Pakistani "ranking officers" and toured Lahore, Karachi, and other military installations.

Prior to arriving in Bucharest on 4 July, Zhang made a brief stopover in Belgrade where he met Petar Gracanin, Yugoslav Chief of the General Staff at the airport.

At a meeting with Romanian Defense Minister Constantin Olteanu, Zhang praised the Romanian Army for its efforts to modernize itself in carrying out the RCP's military thinking about national defense. Zhang and Olteanu praised the friendship between the parties and Armies of the two countries. They also briefed each other on the development of the economies and Armies of their countries. Zhang is scheduled to visit Army units and military installations.

On 10 July, Zhang met with Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu who described Zhang's visit as a success which showed the friendly relations between the Romanian and Chinese Armies and between the two countries as a whole. During their meeting, "emphasis was placed with satisfaction on the ties of friendship and collaboration between the two parties, countries and peoples, which follow an ascending course in keeping with summit understandings. . . [and] on the broad opportunities for the further growth of bilateral relations in the political, economic, technical-scientific, cultural and other spheres, for the benefit of both countries and peoples, of the cause of peace, socialism and collaboration throughout the world." The two leaders also discussed current international issues including the escalating arms race. The need to eliminate the use and threat of force from international relations, solve all interstate conflicts and litigious issues by negotiations and peaceful means was underscored.

Zhang briefed Ceausescu on China's effort to streamline its Armed Forces, and make its troops younger, more revolutionary, intellectual, and specialized. Zhang praised the Romanian Army, under Ceausescu's leadership, for its success in raising its military and political caliber, realizing modernization, and participating in the country's economic construction.

Zhang Aiping arrived in Portugal on 15 June. On 17 June he met with his counterpart Rui Machete; they exchanged information about their respective armies. The Portuguese press reported the two countries are interested in exchanging technology in the defense sphere. Zhang visited Centrel where he paid particular attention to the radio transmitter-receivers and military telephones manufactured by that company. On 18 June Zhang met separately with President Ramalho Eanes and Prime Minister Mario Soares. Prior to his departure on 22 June, Zhang visited a military unit and some military facilities.

Summary

Minister of National Defense and State Councilor Zhang Aiping's trip to Pakistan, Romania, and Portugal (27 June-22 July 1985) received scant press coverage. Members of his entourage were not identified. Very little of his meetings with top foreign leaders was revealed. In all three countries he met with the President, high-ranking defense officials, and visited military installations. The Portuguese press reported China and Portugal are interested in exchanging defense-related technology.
